KAISER CUTS DOWN
HIS VISITING LIST

He Declares that He "Will Receive
No More Americans Except Officially."

Berlin, April 5.—Emperor William has declared that he will receive no more Americans except ambassadors and official envoys. This decision was taken as a result of the interview with Col. George W. Goethals, the builder of the Panama Canal, printed in the United States, in which Col. Goethals quoted the Emperor with regard to the heavy fortification of the Panama Canal.

Emperor William is quoted by courtiers, who view with dislike the admission of any Americans to the inner imperial circle, in the following words: "When I receive visitors it is understood as a matter of etiquette that the conversation remains private and confidential. There is nothing extraordinary about this. It is a rule of polite life, and for any one to do otherwise is a breach of good faith. It is not the first time I have been treated this way by Americans, but I intend that it shall be the last."

This statement by Emperor William shows that the denial that he has been accurately quoted by Col. Goethals, who reported him as saying "that the canal should be strongly fortified, and that the United States should have a very much stronger military force there than we have now," was technical and made for political effect.

A Next Shot.
From the Argonaut.
It was at one of the famous "frolics" given by the Lambs. Charles Frohman had made an extremely neat and appropriate speech. There was loud applause at its finish, and then "Author" Author cried Augustus Thomas, standing up on his chair.
